The Bradford County Museum, located in Towanda, was originally a jail and was converted into a museum in 1998. Built in 1871 with prisoners moved into the jail in 1873, it was utilized as a jail for 118 years. In 1991, the jail was determined to be no longer usable as a jail and a new, larger jail was planned to be constructed somewhere else in the county. The Bradford County Historical Society acquired the land in 1998 to convert the space to a museum. Today, area residents and visitors can enjoy the history of our region a truly historical building.

A 64-mile-long tributary of the Susquehanna River, the Loyalsock Creek is a major natural attraction in Sullivan County.

Loyalsock Creek south of Dushore contains a bed of quartz sandstone known as the Haystacks and are part of the Mississippian-Denovian Upper Huntley Mountain Formation.

Loyalsock Creek was originally named Lawi-saquick, a name used by the Legau-hanne Indians. In addition to its historical significance, the creek's main tributary is Little Loyalsock Creek, confluent at Forksville. Both Forksville and Forks Township found their name from creeks joining there.

Loyalsock Creek is frequently used for whitewater kayaking, abundant fishing, and hiking on the surrounding trails through Worlds End State Park, which the creek flows through.

Susquehanna County's Civil War Significance

Susquehanna County is well known for the underground railroads prominent during the Civil War. Montrose, the county seat, was active in the abolitionist movement. In fact, the Civil War Soldier's Orphan's School in Harford is now a museum but at one time it provided a place for children of Civil War Veterans to live and learn.

Recreation

Susquehanna County offers a plethora of activities for both local residents and incoming tourists. Salt Springs State Park, located just north of Montrose, boasts various trails, a picnic area, and areas for licensed hunting and fishing. In addition, the park is a great place for winter activities like cross-country skiing, sledding, and tobogganing.

Other winter wonderlands include Elk Mountain Ski Resort, an extremely popular destination in Susquehanna County. Located in Uniondale, the resort has many ski programs and trails for both beginner and experienced skiers.

Other recreational attractions include the D&H Trail with 32 miles of hiking, the Florence Shelly Preserve, five State Game Lands, Callender's Sugar House & Cross Country Ski Area, and Woodbourne Forest and Wildlife Sanctuary.
